MCRAWFORD'S. IN LANE NANNIE'S CHRISTMAS TREE.

By "Virginia."

CHAPTER XXII.
You'd never in the world have known that was Donald if I hadn't told you, would you? He hardly knew himself that his warm suit of clothes. He had been wandering up and down the river bank for over an hour looking for the "Picture Gallery."

He passed it half a dozen times, but no wonder he didn't see it, for the odd little craft was drawn close up on the other side of the big wooden dock.

"Donald, Donald!" suddenly cried a familiar childish voice. He looked up and down, but saw nobody he knew.

"Here, here I am!" cried the little girl standing in the dock, waving her hand, and then as he came nearer she said:

"Where'd you get them beautiful clothes? an' a new hat an' shoes, my! Where'd you get 'em, Donald?"

"I know it was you in a minute, but Janet said it wasn't. Papa's gone to find work, nobody didn't want their pictures took in Alton, an' if papa gets a job we're agoin' to have some dinner just as he comes back. We didn't have any breakfast an' Janet's been a crying awfully hard all day, but don't tell her I told."

And as they stopped off the dock Janet and Bobbie appeared.

"Why, Donald!" cried the young lady in astonishment. Then, "Why, child, where on earth did you get those clothes?"

"A good, kind man gave them to me, Janet; and see, I've got a dollar besides."

"Where'd you get it, boy?"

They all started. Just behind Nannie stood her father.

Janet looked at him then the tears arose: "Father, you've failed to get anything. What shall we do?"

"Take this dollar, Janet; I can get more. I've got a good place and."

"Everybody's in luck except me," said the man in a bitter tone, but he took the dollar and started off, saying: "I'll bring you something to eat."

Then Jack and Nannie began questioning Donald about his new friend, and he had a hard time to get along without "telling." All of a sudden Nannie remembered something. "Say, Donald, isn't this where Crawford's Great Broadway Bazaar is, where they have all the toys, an' dolls, an' sleds, an' everything?"

"Yes," said Donald.

"Oh, Janet can't we go there? Do you know where it is, Donald?"

Donald could have shouted in glee. This was the very thing. So after promising to come back for them in the evening and take them to see Crawford's he left to report to his new friend.

(To be Continued.)

Note.—And now, children, it's time to begin guessing at the last chapter. Write the chapter the way you think the story ought to turn out, and send it to D. Gentlemen: The large HARD COAL RANGE recently purchased of your company and now set up in my residence, 912 Garrison avenue, is performing in the most satisfactory manner.

Having been housekeeping for many years and using more recently a Range, the facts are I have thrown that one aside, replacing it with one of your "Home Comforts" (hard coal) which I believe to be the best in use, being Economical and Unsurpassed for Expeditions cooking, and I therefore with pleasure commend it to all housekeepers, believing its use will bear out my statements.

Very truly yours,
GEO. D. CAPEN.

Kilrain and Smith Fight One Hundred and Five Rounds.

The Mill Stopped When Jake Would Have Won in a Round.

Details of the Great Battle for the Championship of the World—The Fight Comes Off in France—Darkness Alone Saves Jim Smith From Defeat—Kilrain Very Strong at the Finish—Jakes Makes a Showing That Astonishes the Britishers.

Special Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.
VERNON, Eure, France, December 19.—The fight between Jim Smith and Jake Kilrain has taken place, but there is no decision, as darkness prevented a conclusion. One hundred and five rounds were fought. The men battled two hours and twenty minutes. Both fought with great gameness, but Kilrain showed from the start that he was the better man. The struggle was terrific, and Kilrain would certainly have whipped his man had there been only a few minutes longer. He was strong and bold from the start, and showed a determination to win that gave his backers every confidence in his success from almost the time he landed his first blow. His attacks were admirable, and Smith was sent to the grass several times. The latter, however, got first blood, although he did not down Kilrain once. All admitted that it was one of the best contests ever fought, and the Englishmen present expressed themselves as strongly pleased with Kilrain's fighting. The betting at the start was in favor of Smith, odds being offered on him of three to one. Smith appeared to see Kilrain's superiority, and showed much wisdom in dropping, as he thus avoided punishment that otherwise would have resulted in his defeat. Towards the end of the mill it was plain that Smith was a gone man, and he kept dropping for safety. When darkness settled down the referee decided that the fight should stop, and that it should be finished to-morrow.

LATER.—The referee told the POST-DISPATCH correspondent that Kilrain and Smith had concluded to call the fight a draw in spite of his orders that should be fought out later. The battle-ground was at Sauverain Island, in the River Seine, about forty miles from Rouen. Referee Atkinson says that Kilrain was as manly a fighter as he ever saw.

CONFIRMED.
NEW YORK, December 19.—A dispatch has been received in this city which says that Smith and Kilrain fought 100 rounds, and the fight was then stopped. Kilrain had the best of the fight and would have won in another round.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.
NEW YORK, December 19.—The following cable was received at the office of the Police Gazette this afternoon:
VERNON, FRANCE, December 19.
One hundred and six rounds. Time two hours and thirty minutes. Resulted in a draw.

PREPARING FOR THE FIGHT.
LONDON, December 19, 3:30 p. m.—The prize fight between Kilrain and Smith is supposed to be progressing at this hour in the vicinity of Rouen.

It is learned this afternoon that the fight between Kilrain and Smith was fixed to take place at 1 o'clock this afternoon on an island in the river Seine, twenty miles from Rouen. Many patrons of the turf have left England for France during the last few days by different routes.

On Friday Kilrain, with his trainer and a few friends, crossed the channel by the Dover boat. Smith was not recognized at any part of the journey, probably owing to the change in his appearance which the shaving off of his heavy moustache created.

Smith with his principal supporter and Jim Howes, his trainer, crossed on Thursday. The sea on that day was exceedingly rough and Smith suffered severely from seasickness. He was obliged to spend the night in Calais and did not reach Rouen until Friday. He stopped at the Hotel d'Albion in Rouen, while Kilrain had quarters at a hostelry only thirty yards away.

On Saturday both men met and shook hands. It was arranged that a steamer should be ready opposite the hotel to-day to convey the whole party to the ground selected for the fight.

It was feared that the secret had leaked out in France and that the gendarmes might possibly interfere and prevent the meeting. Both men were well and anxious to fight. In London to-day the betting is 3 to 1 on Smith, with no takers.

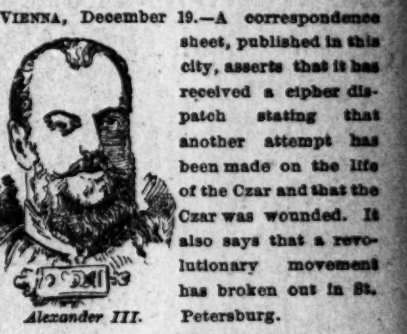

Drapers and Tailors.
The Drapers and Tailors' Exchange of St. Louis, at their annual meeting, at 518 Pine street, elected the following officers: President, L. F. Lindsay; Vice-President, John H. Naylor; Secretary, B. F. Myer; Financial Secretary, Frank Paul; Treasurer, H. A. Schmidt. Preparations were made to attend the banquet of the National Exchange at Cincinnati, January 30, which will be a large body, with delegates from all the principal cities of the Union. The delegates from St. Louis are: L. F. Lindsay, H. A. Schmidt, Frank Paul.

The John Gilbert arrived yesterday from Lagrange Furnace with a good cargo consisting largely of pig iron.

A Revolutionary Movement Breaks Out at St. Petersburg—Date Fixed for the Meeting of the English Parliament—Lord Salisbury's Speech To-Night—The Llanelli Obsequies—Important Austrian Council—Germany's Official Denial—Condition of the German Crown Prince—Foreign News.

VIENNA, December 19.—A correspondence sheet, published in this city, asserts that it has received a telegraphic dispatch stating that another attempt has been made on the life of the Czar and that the Czar was wounded. It also says that a revolutionary movement has broken out in St. Petersburg.

THE WAR COUNCIL.
An Important Austrian Council—Official Denial by Germany.
VIENNA, December 19.—Herr von Thun, the Hungarian Prime Minister, had a conference with Count Kalnoky, the Austrian Prime Minister and Crown Prince Rudolph, prior to the military council to-day. The council was held at noon.

GERMANY'S MILITARY PREPARATIONS.
BERLIN, December 19.—In pursuance of reports made by military personages to the Emperor at his reception on Saturday, a refutation will be issued of the statements printed in the Invalides of St. Petersburg regarding the German military preparations.

LONDON, December 19.—On the Stock Exchange this morning foreign securities opened flat, but at noon the tone had improved on reassuring advices from the Continent.

THE MEETING OF PARLIAMENT.
Lord Salisbury's Speech To-Night—Death of a Celebrated Clergyman.
Special Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.
LONDON, December 19.—The Ministers finally decided at a Cabinet council Saturday on a meeting of Parliament on February 9, a fortnight earlier than the date previously contemplated. Announcements to the latter date had appeared in papers in the confidence of the Government, evidently put out as a feeler, and as an outcry was made about the late meeting, in the present disturbed state of Ireland an earlier date was decided on. Even this is somewhat later than usual. It is quite certain that when Parliament does meet the Ministers will have a difficult part to play. The latest secession from the coalition party, Sir Thomas Grove, Member for Wiltshire, because he cannot approve the action of the Government in imprisoning political offenders after promising to use the coercion bill only against criminals, serves as a reminder of some truth of Harcourt's saying recently that the Liberals opposed to Gladstone are a party of no recruits and many deserters. Grove had no great influence in the House, but his secession is equal to a seat gained for Gladstone, making, of course, a difference of two divisions in favor of some rule.

SALISBURY ON PROTECTION.
I hear that Salisbury, in a speech to be delivered to-night at Derby, will endeavor to allay the fears of a return to protection. He will hardly go so far as to declare in favor of free trade, on the principle of having never been convinced by the arguments of the free traders, but he will probably argue the matter on the grounds of expediency and urge that a free trade policy has resulted in a growth of a large class population, who must have cheap food. Salisbury is well aware that the great difficulty in the way of protection is that nearly all English imports are of raw material and very little of manufactured articles and that the country is not large enough, especially with the present system of large estates and numbers of deer forests, to produce cheap food for the people. Many articles sold as American novelties, etc., are made in Birmingham, hence the prevalent impression that foreign manufactures are largely imported here does not stand the test of examination of statistics. Salisbury's speech will be the last important utterance for the Tory side before New Year. A number of public men are going abroad for the Christmas holidays. I learn that Churchill starts to-day for St. Petersburg, not Seville, as announced.

A PROMINENT CLERGYMAN DEAD.
The sudden death of Herriot Macdonald removes a clergyman whose name is as familiar to Englishmen as the Archbishop of Canterbury. For fifteen years he resided at St. Albans Church, London, ritualistic practices in defiance of the ecclesiastical courts, and went so far as to have the church guarded on Sundays by strong bodies of men with stout sticks to prevent officials carrying out the decisions of his ecclesiastical superiors. This ended, on the suggestion of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, in a compromise, and Macdonald exchanged places with the incumbent of St. Peter's, London Dock. Latterly, however, he returned to St. Albans as curate. He was universally esteemed, and was devoted to the work of relieving the poor, of whom there were large numbers in the neighborhood of St. Albans. His only fault appears to have been his obstinacy in not retiring from the Church of England, although refusing to submit to its modes of worship and jurisdiction.
